A CONSUMER’S GUIDE TO NURSING HOMES

I. GENERAL INFORMATION
All nursing homes in Arizona are licensed by the state through the Office of Long-Term Care Licensing in the Division of Licensing Services, under the Arizona Department of Health Services. State law requires that a nursing home conspicuously post its license. The law also requires that nursing home administrators be licensed. Nursing homes provide services to residents who require continuous medical and nursing care and supervision due to physical and/or mental disability.

In addition to state licensing, nursing homes may be certified to provide services to eligible Medicare and Medicaid beneficiaries and in order to do so, nursing homes must meet federal regulations. The Office of Long-Term Care Licensing enforces state and federal regulations of nursing homes by conducting regular surveys and by investigating complaints.

Nursing homes are operated by for-profit and non-profit organizations and vary in size and offer different programs. All nursing homes provide long term care services to chronically ill persons, including those with chronic mental illness. Many nursing homes also offer short term rehabilitative services (such as those needed to help people continue to recover from recent hospitalization) and special units for people with Alzheimer’s Disease or other types of dementia.

II. CHOOSING A NURSING HOME
When choosing a nursing home, it is important to decide on the location and types of services that will be needed by the prospective resident. Locating a nursing home that provides the services and atmosphere a person needs and prefers, takes time and effort, as well as information. When you consider that the facility becomes a person’s home and community for as long as the person remains there, the search is necessary and worthwhile.

Discuss the situation with other family members, including the person needing the care. If you are faced with having to move someone from a hospital to a nursing home, talk to the hospital's discharge planner or social worker. Other sources of information include your physician, the clergy and religious organizations, volunteer groups that work with the elderly and chronically ill and nursing home professional associations (see Contact Information below) and the Office of Long Term Care Licensing.

Make a list of nursing homes in your area that seem to fit the needs and preferences of the person needing care. The more choices you have, the better your chances of making the best selection. Homes can be eliminated from your list by making a few telephone calls to determine whether a nursing home actually provides the kind of care that is needed, and if needed, whether it participates in Medicare or Medicaid. Not all facilities will have vacancies for new residents.
Nothing is more important in choosing a nursing home than visiting those under consideration. When you visit, be aware of sights, sounds and smells, and trust your instincts. It is important to observe how staff and residents interact with one another; how residents relate to one another; whether or not the environment is “homelike” and how clean and safe the home appears.

It is preferable to visit the facility more than once and at different times of the day. One visit should be during late morning or midday so you can observe the noon meal being served. Another visit should be during the afternoon to observe activities being offered. Another time to visit would be during the evening meal. Plan to spend at least one hour at each visit. It may be best to make an appointment to meet with the administrator the first time you visit the facility to explain the purpose of your visit. Following a guided tour, talk to residents and observe conditions by yourself without facility staff being present. Ask to see the latest state survey (inspection) report and the facility’s plan of correction. The Nursing Home Checklist (attached) will help you regarding what to look for.

People who enter nursing homes do not leave their individual personalities or basic human rights behind. Nor do they lose their need for friendliness, encouragement and respect. A nursing home that treats residents like people and tries to satisfy their emotional, as well as physical needs, helps sick people to get better and healthy people to stay well.

III. OBTAINING A LIST/COMPARING NURSING HOMES

Access the U.S. Department of Health & Human Services, Health Care Financing Administration, Web Site at http://www.medicare.gov/NHCompare/home.asp to obtain a list of all nursing homes by state. Once you have pulled up Arizona, you can refine the search by choosing the entire state, a county, city, zip code, or a particular nursing home. When the list has been narrowed, you may then specify one of the following in English or Spanish: 1) About the Nursing Home: including the number of beds and type of ownership; 2) About the Residents in the Nursing Home: including the percent of residents with pressure sores, percent of residents with urinary incontinence and more; 3) About the Nursing Home Inspection Results: including summary results from the last state nursing home inspection, and 4) About Nursing Home Staff: including the number of registered nurses, licensed practical or vocational nurses, and nursing assistants in each nursing home.

IV. PUBLIC FILES

The Office of Long-Term Care Licensing State files of nursing facilities are open for public inspection in either its Phoenix or Tucson office from 8:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. The files contain: facility license, quality rating, statement of deficiencies, list of services provided, staffing information, fire and food inspection reports, information on substantiated complaints (without confidential resident information or name of complainant), field trip reports (without confidential resident information) and general information such as facility ownership, permits and waivers.

V. YOUR RIGHTS AS A RESIDENT IN A NURSING HOME

The following summarizes specific rights you have as a nursing home resident as provided by Federal and Arizona State statutes, rules and regulations.

Basic Rights:

- To be treated with respect and dignity in full recognition of your individuality.

- Perform or refuse to perform services for the facility.
- Be informed, in writing, of rates, charges and changes 60 days prior to any change.

VI. HELP IN PROTECTING YOUR RIGHTS - THE LONG TERM CARE OMBUDSMAN PROGRAM.
The Long Term Care Ombudsmen Program's primary purpose is to improve the quality of life, care and environment for long term care residents. This includes education as to your legal rights and maintenance of your dignity and personal freedom. In addition, the ombudsman program identifies problems and concerns of older persons receiving long-term care services and recommends changes in the long term care system, which will benefit these individuals as a group.

The function of the Long Term Care Ombudsman Program is specifically to assist consumers of long-term care services toward resolution of complaints related to the provision of such services. Often residents of long-term care facilities have problems, large or small that can readily be solved, but they do not know how to voice them. They are unaware of what services are available or exactly what their rights are so they remain silent. The Long Term Care Ombudsman Program is an attempt to provide residents a method by which their complaints can be heard and resolved, if possible. The ombudsman serves as a companion, mediator, broker, educator and advocate in his/her role to resolve complaints. The program goals are accomplished through a cooperative approach among providers, regulators, residents, families and the ombudsman.

Certified ombudsmen visit licensed long term care facilities. They establish relationships with staff and residents, and are available to help resolve problems that arise in the course of daily living. Anyone (residents, relatives, friends or even the staff of a facility) may initiate a complaint on behalf of a resident. Often residents are unable to do it themselves. Only as mutually agreed upon between the ombudsman and the resident or the resident's legal representative, the ombudsman will make every reasonable effort to assist, represent and intervene on behalf of the resident.

6) Elder Affairs Program – Arizona Attorney General
The Elder Affairs Program (EAP) is an advocacy-oriented program which works to protect the legal rights of older adults in the areas of consumer protection, elder abuse, neglect, and financial exploitation. The program:

- Provides direct advocacy and mediation services to consumers to resolve disputes with businesses.
- Communicates with and makes case referrals to the Consumer Protection and Advocacy Section and Criminal Division of the Attorney General's Office and numerous state regulatory agencies that oversee specific professions, occupations or services.
- Conducts and coordinates educational programs and seminars for the general public, senior citizens' organizations, and professional associations serving incapacitated and vulnerable adults.
- Maintains the Elder Abuse Registry which contains information on civil complaints and criminal charges brought against individuals and agencies for abuse, neglect, financial exploitation and numerous other criminal acts. The Registry lists the name of the alleged abuser and/or institution, court number, type of violation and status of case. The public can request information on a specific person or institution by submitting a written request to the EAP office (see next paragraph for contact information).

To file a complaint with the elder affairs program:
To file a complaint about possible consumer fraud or elder exploitation, follow the process for filing a complaint with the Consumer Protection Section on the Attorney General's Web Site at http://www.attorneygeneral.state.az.us or write a letter explaining the problem and the events as they took place. Copies of any documentation supporting your complaint should also be attached. Send this information to:
